Claims 12-23 are withdrawn from further consideration pursuant to 37 CFR 1.142(b) as being drawn to a nonelected invention, there being no allowable generic or linking claim. Election was made without traverse in the reply filed on 3/31/2005.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-5, 7, and 8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Jarmul.

Note in particular The Figs. 3-6 embodiments of Jarmul, although claim 1 is believed to be anticipated by the Fig. 1 embodiment as well, since the hollow housing with serpentine flow path defined by the shelves 2 is readable on the recited “heat exchanger [which] has at least one serpentine hollow section”.

Regarding claims 2 and 3, note the Figs. 3-4 embodiment, with storage elements 4 tightly held between adjacent shelves defined by serpentine coils. The manner in which these coils are shown to be connected necessitates that they extend in parallel (i.e. the coils of one “shelf” will mirror the coils of an adjacent shelf to allow connection by the straight segments 22).

Regarding claim 8, note insulation 12.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 9 and 10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Jarmul in view of Linder et al.

Jarmul discloses plastic material (rigid or flexible) as a preferred material (over metal or ceramic) for encapsulating the eutectic salt storage substance due to its low weight and corrosion resistance. Linder et al. shows a thermal accumulator (note Fig. 5 embodiment) package in which plate shaped hollow bodies encapsulate a thermal eutectic salt (lines 40-41, column 2). Linder et al. suggest graphite as a material for the storage container due to its dimensional stability and resistance to corrosion (lines 10-25 of column 3). Thus, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the instant invention was made to employ the graphite container material taught in Linder et al. in place of the plastic material suggested in Jarmul (or indeed, to employ the plate shaped storage containers 42 including the preferred heat accumulating salts taught in Linder et al. in place of the salt-filled containers 4 of Jarmul), such being no more than a substitution of equivalents.

Claims 6 and 11 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Kaplan and Iwai et al. show heat storage devices.
